Photographs of and about the New South

Susan Worsham

About the Exhibition

Southbound: Photographs of and about the New South is a multimedia project co-curated by Mark Sloan, former Director and Chief Curator of the Halsey Institute of Contemporary Art and Mark Long, Professor of Political Science, at the College of Charleston in South Carolina.

Comprised of fifty-six photographers' visions of today's New South, Southbound represents the largest exhibition of Southern photography in the early twenty-first century. Each photographer is represented by four works, for a total of 220 photographs.

Southbound embraces the conundrum of its name. To be southbound is to journey to a place in flux, radically transformed over recent decades, yet also to the place where the past resonates most insistently in the United States. To be southbound is also to confront the weight of preconceived notions about this place, thick with stereotypes, encoded in the artistic, literary, and media records. Southbound engages with and unsettles assumed narratives about this contested region by providing fresh perspectives for understanding the complex admixture of history, geography, and culture that constitutes today's New South.

The inclusion of fifty-six photographers, diverse as the landscapes and cultures of the South itself, offers a composite image of the region. From Mitch Epstein's idyllic landscapes dotted with energy towers, to Lisa Elmaleh's grainy tintype portraits of Appalachian folk musicians, to Sheila Pree Bright's compelling black and white photographs of Black Lives Matter demonstrations in Atlanta, the American South is formed and reformed through the lens of photographers with distinct visions of the South. These photographs echo stories told about the South as a bastion of tradition, as a region remade through Americanization and globalization, and as land full of surprising realities.

Southbound's purpose is to investigate senses of place in the South that congeal, however fleetingly, in the spaces between the photographers' looking, their images, and our own preexisting ideas about the region.

Curator Bios

Mark Sloan was the director and chief curator of the Halsey Institute of Contemporary Art at the College of Charleston for 26 years before retiring at the end of 2020. Prior to his appointment to the Halsey Institute, Sloan was the associate director of San Francisco Camerawork and executive director of the Light Factory in Charlotte, N.C. He is also a practicing photographer whose works have been exhibited at many international venues, including the High Museum of Art, Atlanta, Georgia; the American Academy of Sciences, Washington, D.C.; and the Grand Palais, in Paris. He has curated dozens of photography exhibitions in his thirty-three- year career, including No Man's Land: Contemporary Photographers and Fragile Ecologies, featuring Edward Burtynsky, Emmet Gowin, and David Maisel.

Trained in Ireland, Spain, and the U.S., Mark Long has been professor of political science and geography at the College of Charleston since 2002. His research concerns itself with how we see political and cultural geographies; recent publications have explored street art and editorial cartoons. He has guest-curated several exhibitions for the Halsey Institute of Contemporary Art, including Simon Norfolk's Et in Arcadia Ego, Pedro Lobo's architecture of survival, and Stuart Klipper's Antarctica.

Catalogue

To accompany the exhibition, the Halsey Institute produced a comprehensive award-winning catalogue, including additional images by all exhibiting artists and a variety of essays offering a range of perspectives about the South. Essayists include William R. Ferris, former Chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities and former Senior Associate Director for the Study of the American South at the University of North Carolina; Eleanor Heartney, a contributing editor for Art in America, distinguished art critic, and author of several seminal volumes on contemporary art; and John T. Edge, acclaimed author and director of the Southern Foodways Alliance, an institute of the Center for the Study of Southern Culture at the University of Mississippi. The catalogue also features poems by Nikky Finney, Professor of Creative Writing and Southern Letters at the University of South Carolina and 2011 winner of the National Book Award for Poetry. Essays by Southbound co-curators Mark Sloan and Mark Long round out the diverse literary offerings. The volume was designed by award-winning graphic designer Gil Shuler and edited by Sloan and Long.

Film

The Halsey Institute commissioned Emmy Award-winning filmmaker John David Reynolds to produce a short documentary film featuring interviews with select photographers, writers, and Southern subjects. Fourteen "mini" video interviews were also produced to accompany the exhibition.

Interactive Map of the South

To allow Southbound visitors to create their own visions of the South, the Halsey Institute commissioned Dr. Rick Bunch, a geographic information science (GIS) and spatial cognition specialist, to design an interactive map of the South representing everything from street name maps to data collected on chicken processing plants and churchgoers, among other topics. Available on interactive technology inside the exhibition space, this Index of Southerness allows viewers to switch on-and-off indicators and create their own maps of the region.

Micro-Website

A stand-alone micro-website connected to the Halsey Institute's website was produced to expand the exhibition's reach. This site contains additional images by each photographer, links to essays, a commissioned playlist, and the interactive Index of Southerness.

Educational Programming and Materials

The Halsey Institute produced multiple symposia and panel discussions on the topics raised by Southbound. Topics rich for programming might include geography, history, religion, race and ethnicity, literature, documentary studies, foodways, music, and globalization and identity. In addition, a trifold brochure provides information about the exhibition, the artists, and excerpts from the curatorial essay. This free brochure will be given to each museum visitor and is included in the traveling exhibition.
